Notice

A note written for this poster.

Ernst Haeckel, professor at the University of Jena, published the Anthropogenie oder Entwickelungsgeschichte des Menschen in Leipzig, with Wilhelm Engelmann, in 1874, with 12 plates, 210 woodcuts and 36 genetic tables. The twelfth plate, drawn by Haeckel and lithographed by J. G. Bach in Leipzig, is bound between pages 496 and 497.

It draws the descent of man as a single tree, from the Moneren at its root to the Menschen at its crown, with the other groups of animals on its side branches. For its explanation the list of plates refers to the eleventh table, on page 378: “Uebersicht über die wichtigsten Stufen in der thierischen Ahnen-Reihe des Menschen”.

Plate: Ernst Haeckel, 1874, lithograph by J. G. Bach, Leipzig. Public domain.
